RATING IN-ROOM TV SERVICES

Hotel guests have big appetites for a variety of guestroom TV programming.

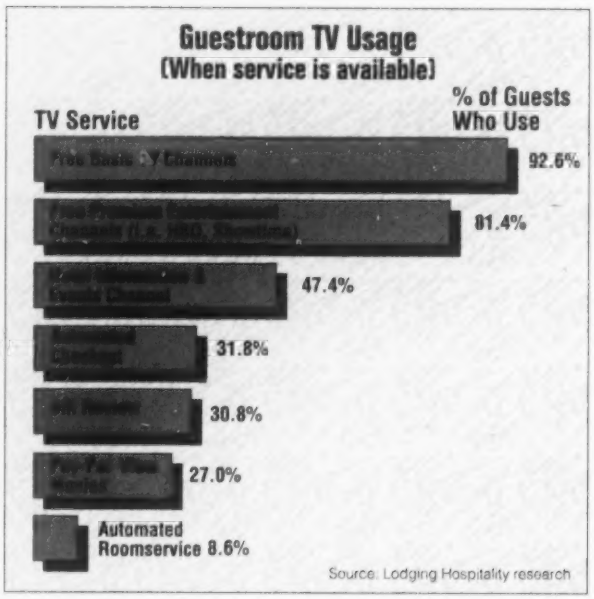
BY EDWARD WATKINS
EDITOR

For many travelers, the bed and television are all that count in a hotel guestroom. Frequent lodging guests, in particular, are accustomed to additional TV programming choices beyond the five or six local channels available in nearly all locations. They want the same kind of variety in basic and premium cable offerings that they probably have at home. They also want access to newer movies and other entertainment options not typically available on home cable.

Lodging operators need to be aware of the TV preferences of their guests as well as the technologies available to satisfy these needs.

A new survey of frequent travelers by Lodging Hospitality shows that hotel guests have big appetites for a wide range of free and guest-pay programming options. The study shows that nearly every guest (93 percent) watches free basic TV channels. Nearly 95 percent say they also watch basic cable sports, news and entertainment channels "nearly always" or "occasionally" when they're available in a hotel.

The vast majority (81 percent) also watch premium entertainment channels such as HBO and Showtime when they're offered by a hotel. More than 40 percent of those surveyed watch these channels on nearly every visit to hotels where they're offered. Another 40 percent watch them occasionally.



Even pay-per-view movies, which cost the guest up to $8 per selection, are watched by more than one-fourth of frequent hotel guests. About 10 percent view them frequently, and 30 percent buy movies at least occasionally.

Where they're available, in-room video cassette players and rental or free videotapes are also popular. More than half of the respondents (52 percent) view video tapes when they can.

TV-based guest services seem to be growing in popularity with travelers. Nearly half of those surveyed use hotel information and events channels; about one-third use automated checkout or bill review when it's available; but fewer than 10 percent of guests say they use automated roomservice.

As expected, guest preferences in programming vary by the time of day. In the morning, news is king: two-thirds of guests watch national news, about half prefer local news and 43 percent watch cable news. Movies, sports and other entertainment programming fare poorly: fewer than 10 percent watch non-news programs when they wake up.

In early evening, national news is the top preference for most guests. Also popular are network programming (i.e., ABC, NBC, CBS), free movies and cable news. About one-third of guests watch live sports, and a few (30 percent) prefer local news.

Many guests apparently turn to movies to relax in late evening. Free movies is the late-evening programming choice for 62 percent of those surveyed. Adult movies are preferred by one-fourth of guests, while pay movies are the choice of 23 percent of respondents. Live sports and national news are the choice for about one-third of guests. About one in five guests watch the late evening local news.

The survey also asked frequent travelers to speak out on the new array of pay TV technology. When given a choice, more than 40 percent of guests prefer guest-pay movies at times they can choose. Nearly one-third want in-room videotape player and tape rental availability. If they could, 16 percent would choose one daily charge for 24 hours of movies. Pay-per-program at fixed times is the top choice for eight percent of guests.

Lodging Hospitality surveyed 5,000 frequent travelers from the circulation lists of Penton Publishing, publisher of more than 40 business and industrial magazines, including Lodging Hospitality. More than 500 usable returns were tabulated for the results.

Those who responded to the survey average between six and ten business and between one and five leisure trips per year in which they stay in hotels. Research assistance was provided by Lynn Herbst, Lodging Hospitality editorial assistant. LH
